«Southern» Moscow Medical Technology Cluster

«Southern» Moscow Medical Technology Cluster («Southern» MedTechCluster) is a collaboration between private sector companies, hospitals, research institutions, universities, manufacturers and R&D companies. A great tradition in integration science and education, the very highest level of basic and applied research and availability of qualified and skilled workers eventually holds significant future potential.

Today, «Southern» MedTechCluster brings together around 15 members. Nevertheless, this number will be significantly increased due to manufacturers, private sector and R&D companies in the near future.

The goal of «Southern» MedTechCluster is to achieve efficient cooperation and networking of its participants along the entire medical technology added-value chain. Not to mention the fact that the Cluster aims to help to bring new products to the market and facilitates quick product launches.

«Southern» MedTechCluster is focused on activities such as:

- promotion of the innovation process along the research-production market;
- knowledge and technology transfer optimization;
- support for innovative young companies;
- training and continuing professional education.

South-West Administrative District of Moscow (the majority of the participants belongs to which) is the ideal location for working successfully in various estimates. On the one hand this District has the advantage of modern infrastructure. And economies of juxtaposition on the other.
